Dearest Sir Terrance Lindall, Wow! I saw from Zazzle worldwide YouTube it's already using this Five years ago. . . . This zazzle worldwide marketing partnered with Warner Bros is big business and they're not put the name of WAH Center collection and the name of the artists because this Artificial Intelligence can not be tracked on the algorithmical Google Search... But we found that through the random search. . . . These are against business policies and possiblity this Zazzle worldwide marketing should pay for the WAH Center and we hope you can post it and ask Atty Peter Dizzoza and files for new cases of New York City Courts and time to put in the New York Times for the biggest art news for WAH Center art world history and our names on the newspaper in the New York Times and this is the best way and Zazzle worldwide will be ready to pay for WAH Center... And this is a suggestion if we want to be big money from Zazzle worldwide marketing if they violated the US policy of the World business. Stay safe and stay healthy Sir Terrance Lindall And Ma'am Yuko Nii. Sincerely your Brother Bienvenido Bones Banez Jr.

Comment: Please be advised that I represent Bienvenido Bones Banez regarding his infringement claim arising from your use of his painting on your paneling product.

The image was designed and painted by Mr.
Banez. While he has shared this work, it was never a work for hire. He has always shared it as his work product, with his name upon it. He has never relinquished his ownership in this, his own creation.
To have obtained the image with the removal of information that identified it as his was a further violation of his rights.

Please provide your sales records to date.

In addition please advise whether you obtained a license for permission to use the image of his painting. Any purported licensee offered rights they did not have. Please be further advised from the artist himself that you do not have the right to use this image.

We are willing to discuss a resolution of this claim without litigation.

Thank you for your anticipated cooperation.
